To whom it may concern:

My name Lou Frazier, I am a former major league player and coach. I have been involved in professional baseball for over 14 years. Over past 20 years, I've continued as a consultant for both collegiate and professional players, as well as managing a baseball training center.

I am writing this letter of recommendation for Brok Liu. I have had the pleasure of working with Brok for over 7 years, and can whole heartedly vouch for his ability and potential as a collegiate ball player as well as his character as a young man. Brok has always been an excellent hitter. Extremely quick hands, capable of driving the ball with power to all fields. Especially opposite field. In addition, he possesses the tools and athleticism to be a topnotch infielder. As a coach, Brok has made my job pretty easy. It's truly been a pleasure mentoring him. He's always upbeat, attentive, a quick learner, and athletic enough to make appropriate adjustments when instructed. His work ethic is excellent. He puts in the time on the field and in the weight room. It's been especially impressive, despite all the gyms being closed down, seeing him pack on over 10lbs of muscle over these past 4 months. As you know, this can only be achieved by a lot of hard work and dedication.

I would welcome a call from you, so I can tell you in more detail my overall impression of this fine young man. I find that this would be much more informative.

In addition, I would also like to offer another experienced resource for you to contact regarding Brok's ability as a ball player. John Kazanas has been a mentor of mine for many years, and has also been in the MLB industry for over 50 years.
